BRIEF NOTICE OF THE ORIGIN OF THE COLLEGE.

---

JEFFERSON COLLEGE was chartered by the State, and regularly organized in 1802. Prior to that time there existed an Academy, called Canonsburg Academy which commenced soon after the first settlement of the country. This was the first Literary Institution west of the mountains. It originated in a small log cabin, where the first Latin school was taught by the Hon. JAMES ROSS, of Pittsburg, under the patronage and direction of the Rev. Dr. M'MILLAN. The number of students having increased, a comfortable stone building was erected in 1790. The Canonsburg Academy was then instituted, and respectable Professors appointed in the various departments of Literature. Here many of the most distinguished men in the Western Country received their education, and may be ranked among the honored Alumni of the Institution, although their names do not appear among the Graduates under the College charter.

The Literary Societies are on the very best footing; and the Halls for their accommodation, more commodious and tasteful than any for the like purpose in the Western country.

An Athenæum is connected with the College, in which the choicest Literary, Scientific, and Political publications are received. In addition to the College and Society Libraries, there is also a Student's Library, consisting of a number of copies of all the Class Books required in the course of study.

A Lyceum has been instituted, which contains a respectable Cabinet of Minerals, and numerous collections in Natural History and Indian Antiquities.

A Missionary Reading Room has been recently opened in the College, by the "Brainerd Society," in which the religious periodicals of the day are received. This room is open for the use of all the students, free of expense.

A valuable farm is connected with the College, affording facilities for reducing the expenses, and promoting the health of the Students who engage in manual labor.

Boarding may be had in the College Commons—in private families in the town or the country—on the farm or in private associations, and varies from $1.12½ to two dollars per week. Coal is 3½ cents per bushel—washing 3 dollars per session. College expenses amount to $25 per annum, which includes tuition, fuel, janitor's services, library and all contingent expenses.

The Annual Commencement takes place on the last Thursday of September. The vacations occur in October and April.

NOTE.—The uncontrolled use of funds is replete with temptation and disaster to inexperienced youth. Parents are earnestly desired to remit funds only to some responsible person, whom they may appoint as guardian for the time being, and to pay no bills without their sanction. College expenses, including tuition, boarding (exclusive of vacations) washing, fuel, &c., ought not to exceed $120—with economy, $90.
